LIVES 18 DAYS IN MESSINA RUINS

Two Girls and a Boy Partly Dig Their Own Way Out

Rome, Jan. 16.—Two girls, one aged 20 and the other 19, and their brother, aged 13, were rescued yesterday from a pile of ruins near the Church of the Apostles, Messina, where they had been entombed for eighteen days. Their condition is pitiable. Some soldiers near the place heard faint cries from beneath the pile of debris and immediately began to excavate. Their work was extremely difficult, but they persisted and were finally rewarded by finding the three still alive. The three are named Minisale. They say their mother was killed and that their father is in America. Fortunately they were within reach of a supply of onions, oil, wine and water sufficient to keep them alive. A little sister as well as their mother was killed. The survivors were with them in part of a small room which astonishingly escaped pulverization. Their own efforts led to their rescue. The boy, Francesco, was particularly active. They excavated the ruins with their hands until they were near enough to the surface to make their cries heard. The latest report is that all are less afflicted than was at first feared. Their rescue has given impetus to search elsewhere.

WIFE FREED FROM HUSBAND WHO LEFT HOME RATHER QUEERLY

Over three years ago Franklin H. Cole of Danbury, told his wife he was going away because he had trouble with his employer, a marketman named Ehrie. In the Superior court yesterday the wife, Anna E. Cole, told the court that she had not seen her husband since that time although she knew he was with his father at Cannon's Station in the town of Wilton where their daughter visited occasionally. Mrs. Cole told the court she knew of no reason her husband should have left her except that he told her he had got into trouble where he worked. Since that time she has supported herself. Her story was corroborated by her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Edwards, of 6 Whalley street, Danbury, and Mrs. Louie Nage of 88 Franklin street of the same place. Attorney William H. Cable appeared for the plaintiff. Mrs. Cole was allowed a decree.

Why Kirk's Wife Left Home; Provided Ground for Divorce

Hiram W. Kirk, driver for a local furniture company, secured a divorce from his wife, who was Winnie Sweeney before her marriage, in the Superior court yesterday. The decree was granted on the ground of desertion. The plaintiff told the court that his wife was not contented because he allowed his mother and sister to live in his house at 63 Sedgwick street and because he would not deed the property to her. When he sold the property he said his wife left him and took their daughter with her. He showed rent receipts to show he had not received a place for his family and testified that his wife had refused to live with him. Carrie D. Kirk, sister of the petitioner and a libellant, testified in her brother's behalf, as did Thomas H. Dickson who purchased the Sedgwick street property from Kirk. Attorney Frederick A. Bartlett appeared for the plaintiff.

DIVORCE GRANTED

Mrs. Elma Stormfelt was granted a divorce from Carl O. Stormfelt by Judge Gager in the Superior court yesterday. The couple were married in Denmark in 1902 and had three children. In the case was a decree of separation granted the plaintiff by the Danish government ordering the couple to live apart for three years and the husband to pay alimony of two crowns a week. The stipulation was that a return of the wife to the husband within the three years would cause her to forfeit her right to ever apply for a divorce again in the Danish courts. The separation decree was granted in Denmark on the ground of Intemperance and cruelty.

On the back of the document was a blank form where the alimony was to be received for. The document showed that the husband had paid for one week and that he had fled to Germany to escape future payments. She brought her two children to this country in 1905 and had since made her own living. Her husband had visited her twice since she has been in Bridgeport and asked her for money.

"JUNIOR PROM" WEEK AT YALE BEGAN TO-DAY

(Special from United Press.) New Haven, Jan. 16.—"Junior Prom Week," the biggest social event of Yale's year, began this afternoon with the first production of "The Critic" and "The Fiddlers" by the Yale players. Prom girls from far and near in their fluffiest frocks and under-graduates in their swiftest trimmings—to say nothing of hosts of chaperones—forgot classes and lectures and flocked to a round of musicals and social gatherings.

Ogden's Wife Went Back to Mamma;

Ogden Now Wifeless

Edward Ogden, aged 26, a machinist at the Crane Co.'s West End plant, was granted a divorce from Violet Ogden of Manchester, England, by Judge Gager in the Superior court yesterday. He testified that he married her in England in 1903 and that his married life was a constant struggle. He intimated that his home was near that of his mother-in-law and that his wife was a great deal of her time there, with the result that she finally returned to her parents' home. He had talked with her since and she said she was perfectly contented to be where she was and did not want to return to him. The plaintiff said he provided for the support of his child who resided with the mother.

NEWTOWN.

The chicken pie supper given by the ladies of Trinity church, Thursday evening, was all that could be wished for by the inner man. The fluency of the weather no doubt kept away many who lived at a distance, but on the whole it was a very successful and enjoyable affair. An old fashioned spelling bee occasioned much amusement. The beautifully laden tables put on the level unexpectedly as they carefully crawled along.
